by propagating a specific ideal of the European city the European Union significantly influences development policy in the continent's urban regions. Officially the EU does not have a remit to do so but the future of its cities is seen as crucially important for the future of the Union itself. The EU Commission has therefore favoured strategically a multi-governance model for urban development which has gradually increased the influence of local and regional actors on national urban policies mediated by an extensive lobby and discourse network largely under the supranational Commission's guidance. The dossier outlines how this strategy developed from the 1990s onwards culminating in the 2016 Pact of Amsterdam. It presents an analysis of all relevant documents of the last three decades, describes the main actors of EU urban development and traces the consensual method of urban policy in contemporary Europe. It also presents an overview of practically all EU-financed or co-funded projects in European cities since the 1990s and their rationales of EU cohesion, environmental and climate change mitigation policies in favour of urban regional development.

Cities have become increasingly important to global politics but have largely occupied a peripheral place in the academic study of international relations. This is a notable oversight for the discipline, although one which may be explained by its traditional state-centrism, the subjugation of the city to the demands of the territorial state in the modern period, and a lack of conceptual and analytical frameworks that can allow scholars to include the impact of cities within their work. Presenting case-specific scholarship from leading experts in the field, each contribution guides the reader through the changing nature of cities in the international system and their increasing prominence in global governance outcomes. The book features case studies on the financial power of cities, city action in the security domain, collaboration of cities in coping with environmental problems, transnational urban regions and mayors as international actors to illustrate if the relationship between the city and the state has changed in profound ways and how cities are empowered by structural changes in world politics. The multidisciplinary and global focus in the power of cities in international relations sheds much-needed light on the significance of the reemergence of cities from the long shadow of the nation-state. Only by examining the mechanisms that have empowered cities in the last few decades can we understand their new functions and capabilities in global politics.
